As Europe continues to navigate the largest displacement since World War II, this comparative analysis offers insights for policymakers, civil society, and researchers working to strengthen response and support systems.

The report synthesizes findings from national studies in Germany, Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, and Sweden, examining how policies in housing, education, and the labour market have shaped the reception of Ukrainians displaced by Russia's full-scale invasion. It also highlights key gaps between policy and practice, revealing where implementation challenges persist across cases.

We look forward to your participation!
